

HETS Chair Message

As HETS Chair and academician, I am incredibly proud to present the Volume XIII, Fall Issue, of the HETS Online Journal, now on a new editorial platform. This new channel allows us to better showcase articles and their authors in a more relevant and dependable manner. It also brings our Journal up to the standards of publications of this nature. Likewise, the platform provides authors and users alike, a more intuitive navigation of current issues and easy access to our archive of 12 years of expert works that have contributed to the academia with research and scientific papers.

In this issue, we have received numerous and interesting articles, in both English and Spanish, discussing such topics as, virtual reality, virtuality and transformational leadership, and traditional textbook versus a digital openly-licensed textbook, among others.

We encourage you to enjoy reading the insightful articles published in this edition; to share the Journal with colleagues, academicians, students, and administrators engaged in higher education; and consider submitting your articles for publication in the spring issue. Interested authors should send their manuscripts by Friday, March 31, 2023. For more information and guidelines, visit hets.org/ejournal/call-for-papers/.

Finally, we extend our invitation to join HETS collaborators as reviewers of our publication. If you are interested, please send an e-mail to info@hets.org.

We hope you enjoy this edition as much as I have!

Regards,
