

HETS Chair Message

As HETS Chair and academician, I am incredibly proud to present the Volume XIII, Spring Issue, of the HETS Online Journal, now on a new editorial platform to bring up to the standards of publications of this nature. Through this new channel, we can better showcase articles and their authors in a more relevant and dependable manner. Likewise, the platform provides authors and users more intuitive navigation of current issues and easy access to our archive of 12 years of expert works that have contributed to academia with research and scientific papers.

In this issue, we have received numerous exciting articles, in both English and Spanish, discussing such topics as, Project-Based Approach, closing the Equity Gap and Improving the Success of students, Self-Regulation of Learning among Graduates Studying online, and Dissertation Challenges Faced by Hispanic Graduate Students, among others.

We hope you enjoy reading the insightful articles published in this edition; share the Journal with colleagues, academicians, students, and administrators engaged in higher education; and consider submitting your articles for publication in the Fall Issue. Interested authors should send their manuscripts by Friday, September 29, 2023. For more information and guidelines, visit hets.org/ejournal/call-for-papers/.

Finally, we extend our invitation to join HETS collaborators as reviewers of our publication. If you are interested, please send an e-mail to info@hets.org.

We hope you enjoy this edition as much as I have!

Regards,
