

Message from the Chief Editor

Dear colleagues,

The field of online education is reaching new horizons.

More and more universities and other educational institutions are adopting online education or integrating technology in their processes.

That is why it is imperative to share what has worked and what has not in technology and education so that the learning curve is shorter for those new to the field.

Some of the most relevant topics covered in this issue of our Journal are the integration of information systems in education, best practices in implementing an online learning strategy in higher learning institutions, among others.

I want to reiterate my deepest admiration for those who are daring to discover new ways of bringing educational opportunities to those who did not have access to high quality education in the past.

HETS is confident that the new global exposure through EBSCO databases will provide to the journal would be an excellent opportunity to share our knowledge focused on Hispanic and the integration of new technologies in Education. In addition, we are certain that our articles will be an asset to researchers using their research database system.

Respectfully yours,

Dr. Ivonne Chirino-Klevans
