June 2017

INTRODUCTION

The Hispanic Educational Technology Services (HETS) is the first bilingual consortium dedicated to serving the higher education needs of the fast-growing Hispanic communities. This non-profit consortia-type organization is constituted by more than 40 affiliated post-secondary institutions in the United States and Puerto Rico, Hispanic Serving Institutions (HSIs) and emerging HSIs. HETS seeks to promote, support, and increase the capabilities of member institutions in order to enhance Hispanic/Latino students' success and opportunities in Higher Education. HETS member institutions are constituted by nearly 25,000 faculty members and serve over 770,000 students, of which approximately 60% is Hispanic. Education and technology related corporations and nonprofit organizations from the United States, Puerto Rico, and Latin America have also joined varied group of institutions in support of the advancement of Hispanic Higher Education and Hispanic student success.

For almost 25 years, HETS has been a strong advocate of the use of innovative technologies to improve higher education opportunities for Hispanics. Starting in 1993 as a group of institutions interested in sharing courses at distance, HETS evolved from the use of telecommunications into the asynchronous modes of anywhere-anytime learning, and the use of technology to reach greater collaboration among and within educational institutions. In 1995, HETS received funding from the Public Telecommunications Facilities Program of the US Department of Commerce to establish electronic classrooms at nine member institutions with satellite connections so they could share their academic offerings at a distance. In 1999, the Fund for the improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE) awarded HETS a Learning Anytime Anywhere Partnerships (LAAP) grant for the creation of an online bilingual support website for students and faculty training workshops and tools to expand Latino student's opportunities and access to education. HETS was able to develop a bundle of virtual learning and support services for students and faculty through a non-stop innovative web portal known as the Virtual Plaza. HETS also encouraged the development of joint online degree programs and certificates among member institutions. Over 50 academic leaders, faculty, and distance learning directors from 14 HETS member institutions joined this effort.

Through the years, HETS has consistently continued to focus on strategic options to widen opportunities for the success of the Hispanic learner and building the necessary support systems to achieve this through the use of technology. The Consortium promotes a discourse on how to effectively incorporate technology into education to foster student success, providing guidance to members on technology options available and promoting distance education as a strategy to support the non-traditional Hispanic learner. Fostering quality teaching through the incorporation of technology is another essential part of the Consortium's agenda. Many of HETS efforts place emphasis on helping member institutions optimize faculty performance in both face-to-face and online environments through effective use of technology. Another priority has been to promote motivation, student engagement, and academic success. Furthermore, the Consortium centered on collaboration as a key strategy to pave the way for progress in Higher Education and, overall, for the success of the learner.

During its most recent strategic period, a five-year period from 2012 to 2017, HETS developed a series of programs and services to continue widening opportunities in Hispanic Higher Education and further promote leadership and innovation in Higher Education. Through these programs and services, HETS promoted research and key issues in Hispanic Higher Education; directly impacted student and faculty; fostered ongoing learning and development; and established key partnerships and alliances to further impact education and foster innovation. The 2017-2020 Strategic Plan is the result of a collaborative process that incorporated survey feedback from member constituencies, the results from strategic sessions with the members of the Board of Directors, and guidance from the Board Executive Committee. Strategies included also contemplated the contributions and experiences shared by several experts and collaborators at member institutions. Moreover, the strategic planning process took into consideration the knowledge and experience gained throughout the past five years. HETS continues to look into a future of innovation, effective relations, and both inter-institutional and intersectoral collaboration for the success of Hispanic Higher Education.
